TRE Consular report on the trade of Yokohama-which reachedus by last mail-shows a flourishing conditionof-afficire, the total value of the trade for 1888 revealing an increase of 222 per cent, on that of the previous year, This is the more satisfactory since the trade of 1887 showed as advance on that of 1986. The gross value of the trade for 1888 was £12,668,450; that of the imports beng 26,391,707, and that of the exports 26,276,748. The import of cotton manufictures abows an increase over that of 1887, amounting to £1,689,021 against £1,163,544; but that of woolien and mixed woollen and cotton manufactures exhibits a slight decrease, the figures being £739,808 against The total of important dexports for 1888thu £785,369. During last month these four slaves tried to make their escape by a boat to Boeleling, any place nearer than Mulaya in question it would where they would be under the Dutch Flag, but, be treated as a huge practical joke. As it is the wind failing them, they had to put in and the matter should engage the attention of Paranchor off the coast of a small island called liament if the Colonial Office cannot see its way Karang Asam. Here they were recognised and captured by their master's son, who immediately put them in irons and had them returned to deemed a sub-branch of the Colonial Office Ser-Ampanan. After this the two women were taken to the house of Sved Abdullas Alkadari where one of them had her hands tied together above her head. E he was then suspended to a tree by her hands for three hours, after which she received fifty lashes on her bare back with a ratter. This woman was reported to be in a delicate condition at the time. The other woman had her nose and ears outoff and was then stripped naked and received eighty lashes with the ration, from the effects of which she was covered with blood. Sved Abbullah Alkadari than ordered his men to rub her body with a mixture of sall, tamariad and vinegar. She is now lying insensible and unable to move a muscle or utter a sound, and is not expected to live long. Syed Abdullah Alkadari has given orders that she is to be kept in chains till shedies. These are not the only examples of this typint's cruelties, nor is he theonly one of his nation who inflicts such punishments. Not long age another Arab named Syed Saik, without any provocation, ordered one his female slaves to be put in chains, and then had her burnt with a red-hot iron in a manner too atracions to be described. The cries of this poor victim were heartrending. It is said that the Rajah bimself is n teo cruel as the Arabs. If any of his slaves offend him, he sells them and so resuburses himself against loss. At the same time takes no steps to put a stop to the brutality of the other slave drivers. He says that if they prefer to murder a slave rather than sell ther do the macket harm by incurring the loss of a servant for whom they have had to pay Two Armenians, who were in Ampanan on the letof August, offered to purchase these four slaves from Syed Abdullah Alkadari for the sau of $400 to save them from death, but their

The annual report of this company again dvice a 6 per cent. dividend. The fleet of the company comprises sixty-two ships, representing an aggregate burthen of 179,108 tons, and 127,650 horse power. Including equipment, the cost of the sixty-two ships amounted to £4,524,385, to which should be added £602,890 representing the cutlay made on other vessels in course of construction. Twelve of the company's steamers were fitted last year with electric light ing apparatus, which is intended to be ultimate ly applied to all the steamers employed upon the postal lines of the undertaking. The severity with which the sinking fund principle applied to the steamers of the Messageries Markimes may be inferred from the fact that the value of the entire fleet of the company is redesmed in ten years. In consequence of the the obligation undertaken by the company by a contract concluded with the State in 1886. the Council of Administration proceeded last year with the construction of no fewer than twelve ships of various types. Two of the first class, vis. the La Plata and the Brazil; and as their names imply, they are intended to be employed upon the company's South American postal lines. One of these vessels was brought into service in April this year, and the other will be ready for use this month. Three other large vessels, of nearly equal importance, viz., the Australian, the Polynesien, and the Tasmanien, are in various stages of advancement. These vessels, as may be inferred from their names, are intended to be employed upon the company's Australian lines. SUNLOCKS, I AM COMING.

It was early susemer, and the day was but hare had been three weeks of drought, and th roads were dusty. Adam walked with a ston blackthorn stick, his flacoid floure sometimes swaving for poise and balance, and his snow white heir rising gently in the soft breeze over his tender old face, now ploughed so deep with lab or and sorrow. Chalse was driving his carrier's cart, whereou sat all that was left of Adam's belongings, save only what the good man carried in his purse. And seeing how heavy the road was to one of Adam's years, though own were hardly fewer, poor old Chales, recking nothing of dignity lost thereby, would have had. him to mount the shafts and perch on the box behind the pony's tail. But Adam, thinking as little of pride, said No. that every herring should hang by its own gill, and the pony had its full day's work before it: moreover, that it was his right to walk at his own expense now, having ridden (wenty years at the expense of the island. So be kept the good blackthorn moving, and Greeks stepped along nimbly by his side. And when the Castletown coach overtook and passed them on its way to Douglas, and some of the farming folk who rode on it loaned over saucily and hailed Adam by his Christian name, he showed no shame or rancour, until, when the wach was gone, he caught a gimpse of the hot colour that had mounted to Greeba's cheeks. Then, without a word, he turned his mellow o'd face to his feet, and strude along a good half mile in silence.

And meantime. Chalso, thinking to lighten the burden of the way with cheerful talk, rattled along in his crazy, screech on many, subjects, but found that all came round, by some strange hands clenched together, But now she stepped ne." twist, to the one subject that might not be dis-Thus looking at his puny he told of the donkey he had before it, the same that A ichae Sunlecks rode long years ago; how he himself had fallen sick and could not keep it, and so gave il without a ponny to a neighbour for feeding it and how when he got better he wanted to bor row it, but the neighbour in base ingratitude and selfishness would not lend it without pay. " Faith, it's alwis lek that," said ( halee. " Giv. a man yer shirt, and ye must cut yer lucky or he'll be after axing ve for ver skin."

Then feeling in his vague way that there was something units with such comfort, he wen back from his doukey to himself, saying that is this world it was "poor once, poor alwis," and that if fute was straight agen ye you were like a lugger without helm and anchor, rollin' in the throw of the sau, soil however ye prayed for blessin it was mighty ticklish stearin', and you were sure and sertin to get foul of some other feila's jib, or tangled in another fella's nets, and when you'd ragged and tors yer best, no matter how you steered, you were safe to strike on a rook Then again he felt himself on the wrong tack and began afresh, and flou dered once more; and each time he set out to say semething that haply might not come amiss he took off his stocking can and stroked his twisted bair down over hi

When they came by Douglas, Chalse was for kirting round it by the Spring Valley through Braddon, but old Adam, seeing his drift, would not pretend to be innocent of it, and said that i there were dregs in his cap he was in the way of draining them without making too many wr faces about it. And as for the people of the town, if they thought no shame to stare at him he thought no chame to be istared at, yet that what was good enough for himself might not be so for one who had less deserved it, and Greebs could go with Chalse by Braddon, and they would meet again on Oneban Hill

To this Greebs would not consent; and as it chanced there was little need, for when they go into Donglas the town was all astir with many ero risses and great troops of people making for the qual, so that up one seemed so much as to we the little company of three that came covered with dust out of the country roads.

" Aw, bad coss, what jeel is this ?" said Chalse and before they, had crossed the little marketpiece by the larbour, where the bells of old St. Matthew's rang out a merry peal, they learned for certain the cause of the joyful commotion: for there they were all but run down by the awaying and surging crowds that came shorting and obsering by the side of an open carriage. wherein out a very old goutleman in the uniform of a soldier - It was, as Adam had already divined the new Governor General, Colonel Cor-Man.
